The Patrons of the Baltimore Director,

And the general public, will find in this edition, for 1849 '50, a more extensive number of householders than the City ever contained by about FOUR THOUSAND.

The Dwellings, Stores, Counting Houses, Manufactories, Workshops, &c., have been visited by competent and discreet men, to obtain the correct address of each occupant, which has been their exclusive business, without having their minds burdened by any business relative to a census, assessing property, numbering houses, making an advertising "Directory," or any other consideration: this alone will appear a Herculean task, but it forms but a tithe of the labor of this Director; that of arranging the respective sur-names, (for the spelling of which there can be no rule,) commencing with each letter in the alphabet from A to Z; but also the christian or given names, such as Aaron, Adam, Alexander, Andrew, &c., in the A. to Zachariah, Zebulon, &c. &c. in Z. By thus classifying the names Abraham, Brutus, Charles, David, John, Wm., Xenophon, &c., the reader will be able at a comparative glance, to find Wm. Brown, John Smith, Thomas Wilson, &c. &c. without going over 3 or 4, 5 or 6 pages in some instances, (if his patience is adequate) and perhaps find it the last of the list, if he does not overlook it in the mass, or in his hurry, and charge the compiler with carelessness or incompetence. The publisher has personally made this, at least laborious, and tedious, classification, which has never before been attempted in Baltimore, and he thinks he can say without vanity, he alone can estimate the intricate performance, however lightly, really or affectedly others may judge of it. This tedious process, with other arrangements, made with a view of facilitating his operations in future has necessarily delayed the publication to this time, (April.) In reducing such a huge mass of matter as that of the names, business, and location of 25000 householders, (we are not so curious as to be exact, but are not much under or over,) to this classification the publisher thinks himself entitled to some degree of allowance in the first attempt, should some inacuracies have grown out of the circumstances, which will be accorded to him by the reasonable and just. To suppose that in such an immense mass, filling about a ream of paper, transcribing, and classifying the sur-names and given names, there is no name mis-spelt, number of house or title of firm, or business incorrect, or misplaced is what no rational individual can expect. In hundreds of instances, where the dwelling has been given at the place of business, it has been at variance with that re-taken there, by probably another individual who took it elsewhere, so also when the business and its location has been given at the dwelling. To correct these contradictions when found in transcribing (which was not our fault) we have had in numberles instances to revisit those places.

This undertaking (though not new to us) has in the present instance been attended with much anxiety, a peculiar sense of responsibility requiring unceasing watchfulness and energy, and though every precaution has been taken to avoid errors and omissions, still they must as a matter of course be expected in some degree, from the nature of the work, tho' we fear not that it will be found the most complete Director yet issued in Baltimore. The alphabetical arrangement having been made as a ground work, and copies printed for our use in future operations, we will be able to move with greater facility, and more scientifically in succeeding editions

After taking the citizens' names, we gave an invitation to such as had moved, changed or commenced business, during the process, to furnish us with their address, and those who availed themselves of the invitation we noted. Those who have not attended to it cannot with justice blame us if their present address is not correct.

We have a book with suitable margin in which we will record all removals, mis-spelling or inaccuracies furnished us, and solicit our friends and fellow citizens to favor us with such corrections as concern them individually. If this be generally attended to, we will at a suitable time issue them in a supplement for their accommodation.

RICHARD J. MATCHETT, Publisher.

BALTIMORE.

The City of Baltimore, is the principal City of the State of Maryland, and ranks fourth in population among the various cities of the United States. It is beautifully situated on an arm of the Patapsco river, called the Basin, and at the head of the noble Chesapeake Bay. No city in the Union possesses superior advantages, either in situation or central proximity to all the interior Western country. It has continued to grow and expand while older towns in the State have remained stationery or even ceased to be. What Marylander but has reason to be proud of the fact, that she has within her bounds a city which stands high in patriotism, enterprise, wealth and reputation among the cities of this great nation. It derives its name from Lord Baltimore, who settled Maryland in 1635, under a grant from Charles I, (Maryland itself was called after the consort of the same king,) so that if any thing is to be gained from kin to royalty, both city and state can come in for a full share; but in these republican times, we are inclined to boast more of the doings of our ancestors, who strove against the oppressions of the power in England, than the derivation of our name. We are always ready to point the enquirer, who feels enough of interest in the place he has chosen for his home, or for the spot where he has been reared, to the many spirited histories extant, of the doings of those who have struggled hard to build up the fair name of our beloved city, nor would we omit the daily records of our numerous journals, whose efforts are so laudably exerted in behalf of our prosperity, all of whom date their existence subsequent to the year 1770.

Much of our present prosperity is attributable to the commercial enterprise of our merchants and mariners, so that in the space of not quite one hundred years, our shipping has increased from one brig, mentioned on the View of Baltimore in 1752, to that of 460 vessels of 97,797 tons burthen, entering from foreign ports during the year 1848, and the clearances of 536 vessels of 118,602 tons to the same, not mentioning the many valuable coastwise and bay vessels which trade with our citizens. Much of our exports have been the growth of our own or neighboring States, including the luxuries, as well as the necessities of life. Not a few of the noble, yet famished population of Ireland, will have cause to remember our products and our liberality. We forbear referring to statistics on these two points, least we might be accused of boasting or vanity.

The undulating surface of the land selected for our city, affords much room for romantic and classical building, so that we have much to encourage the taste and comfort of those whose resources will permit them to embark in either private or public improvement. Every year adds much to the value of lots in or around the city, so that the estimated increase has been 1,920 new buildings last year, and the assessed value of taxable property, upward of two millions of dollars, the total assessed value now being $77,500,000.

So much value was attached to the trade and commerce of our city, that among the earliest correspondence of the City of Boston, some years before the Declaration of Independence, constant efforts were made to secure the co-operation of "the worthy citizens of this flourishing town of Baltimore," (vide Gen. Washington's reply to their address in 1781.) The merchants of Baltimore were looked upon by the Congress of the United States during all the struggle for Independence, as their firm and efficient aiders and supporters. We beg leave to use the words of one of our townsmen, as expressive of this most commendable character in them:

"It appears to me, that no body of men ever watched over the interests of a community of which they were members, with a more sleepless, or intense anxiety, than did the merchants of Baltimore during the revolutionary struggle. They were among the first to suggest the measures which were necessary to be adopted to meet the crisis; they were never backward with their means, in giving efficacy to these measures; and the march of armies, and equipment of vessels of war, were accelerated by their unceasing exertions. Indeed such was the reputation they had accquired for their patriotism abroad, that when it was determined that a detachment of troops from General Washington's army should be sent to the south, under the command of the Marquis de la Fayette, congress confided in the merchants of Baltimore, supplying them with such flour as they might want, in case of need, passing through Baltimore, which was on their way. Mr. Pickering, at that time quarter master general, and Mr. Charles Stewart, commissary general, in a letter addressed to Mr. SAMUEL PURVIANCE, advising of this intended movement of the army, under the command of the Marquis, says: 'We shall make no further apology at present, for giving you this trouble, as we are assured of your readiness to do essential service to your country on every occasion.' The army of the Marquis came to Baltimore, on its way to Virginia, and received not only the flour which the above letter looked to have supplied here, but a considerable sum of money was raised by subscription, and paid over to him for the purpose of purchasing materials for the clothing of his army. It is due to the memory of the ladies of that day, in our town, to record the fact, that that clothing was principally made up by their fair hands.—When the Marquis reached Baltimore, his destitution was not confined to the want of flour, but for nearly all the equipments, without which no army can ever be efficacious. There was but little money at that time in the State treasury, and the supply which was furnished by the patriotic gentlemen of Baltimore, is thus acknowledged in a letter from Thomas Sim Lee, Esq., Governor of Maryland, addressed to Robert Purviance, Matthew Ridley and William Patterson, Esqrs.: 'We very much applaud the zeal and activity of the gentlemen of Baltimore, and think their readiness to assist the Executive at a time when they were destitute of the means of providing those things, which were immediately necessary for the detachment, under the command of the Marquis de la Fayette, justly entitle them to the thanks of the public.'"*

On the return of the Marquis de la Fayette from this successful enterprise he again passed through this city.

Soon after the surrender of Cornwallis, the Marquis de la Fayette came to Baltimore, and was received in the warmest manner by the citizens. He was addressed by them. In referring to the part he took in the campaign of Virginia, they say: "In particular, we cannot sufficiently acknowledge our sense of your late campaign in Virginia, where, with a few regulars and militia, you opposed the British commander, from whose large army and military talents, this state had such serious cause of apprehension." In reply to this part of their address, the Marquis observed: "My campaign began with a personal obligation to the inhabitants of Baltimore; at the end of it, I find myself bound to them by a new tie of everlasting gratitude."

The persons who figured so largely in these early times are mostly passed away, their places are being supplied by the busy hum of men, new scenes arise, more peaceful and desirable, the result, in a great measure of the devoted efforts of the noble spirits who struggled side by side to accomplish these hoped for and blessed results, let us say in passing from this review, that they will not soon be forgotton, by their children or the participants with them of these great results—nor show ourselves behind any that have gone before in devotion to the noble cause of freedom and prosperity.

*See "A Narrative of Events which occurred in Baltimore Town during the Revolutionary War," &c., an interesting volume, just from the press, by ROBERT PURVIANCE, Esq. of Baltimore.

A strong arm of a nation's defence is found in the enlightening of her members, in this laudable work, Baltimore is deeply engaged, every child can find instruction, a small charge is made where the parents are able to pay it, but none who desire instruction have been turned away from our various Public Schools, numbering in all 25, taught by 36 male and 62 female teachers. (Two of whom teach music only,) receiving for their salary upward of $35,000. Containtaining the aggregate of 6,699 scholars, who are taught in all the various branches of ancient and modern science and languages, time would fail to refer to all the public and private efforts which are so successfully pursued among us, suffice it to say, that the juvenile delinquents, are we trust, about to be more particularly cared for, as well as the unforutnate inebriate, the sailor, who braves the ocean's wave, the soldier who meets the enemy of our country on our own or foreign soil, have always come in for a large share of the good feelings of those whose character at home or abroad stands deservedly high.

With the many advantages possessed, and to some extent embraced by our citizens, what is there that can hinder, the continued advancement of our city, whose hills abound in mineral wealth ; yes, the bed of whose river even affords Iron ore, while the surface of the land around us is capable of the highest state of cultivation and embellishment, in both of which, great advances are yearly being made, and we hope the day is not far distant, when more attention will be paid to improve the public squares already enclosed, and secure some of the many beautiful sites yet vacant, for the same laudable purpose.
